

I am a historian...

I am a historian. I study the story of humankind. As a historian, I understand chronology and understand that different societies of people lived in places of the world at different and whilst other societies of people lived in other places of the world. I seek to understand who lived when and know more about their lives and the impact they had on others, locally, nationally and globally. I will ask questions and investigate my own lines of enquiry. I will explore artefacts and use evidence to learn about the past. As a historian, I consider and challenge viewpoints and share my perspective.

Appendix 1: Curriculum Rationale

Why have particular contexts been chosen? Why is it organised in this way? Why will it help children?

The answers to these questions are rooted in the rationale in the design of the curriculum.

This curriculum is coherent, which means it has been carefully considered and each context follows a deliberate order. That order starts with the viewpoint and mind-set of our youngest children, who view the world from their experience and their own and the lifespan of others who are presently alive. As our children grow up, the curriculum will take them further back in time. The further back in time we study, the less concrete evidence exists and more abstract it becomes. Our children will be able to, as historians, appreciate the fragmented and limited evidence that remains the older the time period or era they learn about. It makes sense for children learn their timeline and then investigate further back in time to learn the history of where humankind has come from, as children's ability to imagine the past and understand more abstract concepts aligns to what we know about children's conceptual understanding.

The key concepts outlined will be revisited in every historical context year on year. It is more helpful to children to build layers of meaning through a holistic view of historical contexts; this means when we explore a period or era in time, we can also explore the lives of people, including those of special significance; at the same time we explore the religious, cultural, technological, social and economic and hierarchical structures and at the same time, we revisit abstract terms are prevalent throughout history, such as civilization, empire, invasion, rulership, tyranny, rebellion.

Contexts have been organised to allow pupils year on year to learn in through a local and British history context, as well as a broader global context. This will enable children, year on year to zoom in and zoom out as historians; They will zoom in to what was going on locally and nationally and then zoom out to see what was going at the same time (concurrently) elsewhere in the world. Contexts in History have been aligned to other curriculum areas, such as Science and Geography as these too have been deliberately constructed.
